Una famiglia perfetta

IT2.007.253

Italy. 2012. 111 min. DVD, region 2. In Italian w/English subtitles. Color. Directed by Paolo Genovese.

FearIT2.007.043

1954. Filmed in English. 80 min. B/W. Directed by Roberto Rossellini, with Ingrid Bergman. Rossellini's last and darkest film, it shows a marriage stumbling across lines of suspicion, mistrust, and fear. The husband of the story attempts blackmailing his wife in an effort to force her into a confession of adultery. She tolerates this blackmail because of an abstract guilt over her adulterous actions. The visual motifs, darkness, and shadows create the moral muddle through which the characters move.

Ferdinando and CarolinaIT2.007.276

1999, Italy. DVD. Color. 107 Min. In Italian w/English subtitles. Directed by Lina Wertmuller. In the dazzling court of 18th century Bourbon Naples, against their wishes young King Ferdinando of Naples will wed Carolina, the sweet, 16 year-old daughter of Empress Maria Theresa of Austria. As the monarchies of Europe hold their breath, something unexpected happens. King Ferdinando and Carolina share one common interest a rollicking, orgiastic celebration of the senses and plunge with gusto into the silken bed sheets to uphold their regal duties. As the court of Naples continues on with magnificent splendor and sumptuous pleasure, the sovereigns continue to reign, oblivious to the revolutionary tides that are on the verge of tearing France apart and overtaking all of Europe.

I cento passi

IT2.007.170

2000. DVD. Color 114 min. Directed by Marco Tullio Giordana. "I cento passi" (one hundred steps) was the distance between the Impastatos' house and the house of Tano Badalamenti, an important Mafia boss, in the small Sicilian town of Cinisi. The movie is the story of Peppino Impastato, a young left-wing activist who in the late seventies (when almost nobody dared to speak about the Mafia, and several politicians maintained that the Mafia did not even exist) repeatedly denounced Badalamenti's criminal activities and the whole Mafia system, by using a small local radio station to broadcast his political pronouncements in the form of ironic humour. In 1978 Peppino (30 years old) was killed by an explosion. The police archived the case as an accident or a suicide, but his friends never accepted this conclusion. Note: This is a true story. More than twenty years after Peppino's death, the case has been re-opened. Tano Badalamenti, meanwhile, has been convicted in the USA for drug trafficking.

Love Meetings (Comizi d'amore)

IT2.007.166

1964. DVD. 92 min. Directed by Pier Paolo Pasolini. Microphone in hand, Pier Paolo Pasolini asks Italians to talk about sex: he asks children where babies come from, young and old women if they are men's equals, men and women if a woman's virginity matters, how they view homosexuals, how sex and honor connect, if divorce should be legal, and if they support closing the brothels (the Merlini Act). He periodically checks in with Alberto Moravia and Cesare Musatti. Bersani is intrusive and judgemental, prodding those who answer. The film's thesis: despite the booming post-war economy, Italians' attitudes toward sex are either rigidly Medieval (the poor and the South) or muddled and self-censoring (the bourgeoisie and the North).

Manuale d'amore (Manual of Love)IT2.007.137

Italy. 2005. DVD. Color. 110 min. Directed by Giovanni Veronesi. In Italian w/English subtitles.

A box office smash in Italy, The manual of love (Manuale d'amore) is a charming, bitter-sweet comedy about the mysterious nature of love. The ups and downs of relationships are chronicled through four intertwining episodes, each one played out by a different couple. The innocent, dreamlike stage of falling in love with Tommaso (Silvio Muccino), a young and unemployed man, who falls madly in love with Giulia (Jasmine Trinca); the heart-wrenching phase of relationship crisis represented by Barbara (Margherita Buy) and her husband Marco (Sergio Rubini), who face their first marital crisis after years of love; the impulsive and frenetic epiphany of betrayal represented by Ornella (Luciana Littizzetto), a traffic policewoman, who, as a revenge for her husband's cheating, decides to give traffic tickets to all the male drivers she sees. And, finally, the lonesome, tragic free-fall of being abandoned represented by Goffredo (Carlo Verdone), a brilliant pediatrician, who can't accept the idea that his wife abandoned him after nine years of happiness. The stories are both everyday and extraordinary, sweet and moving, romantic and funny. A refreshingly modern portrayal of love in all its incarnations.

Unable to come to terms with their emotions, they are left to ponder the fate of their marriage, an unstable union destroyed by indifference of habit and impenetrable loneliness.

Notte prima degli esami oggi (Night Before the Exams Today)

IT2.007.139

Italy. 2007. DVD, requires region free player. In Italian w/English subtitles. Color. 98 min. Directed by Fausto Brizzi. A sequel of Notte Prima degli Esami (2005), this film reunites the same cast, reprising their characters from the original film, but transplants them from the 1980's to the Italy of 2006. This leap allows the filmmaker to compare and contrast youth culture across generations, from the era of the call box to the era of cell phones, text messages and online chatting. Thus, the adventures of Luca and his friends return to the screen. While the first film examined friendship, here the focus is on the confused, comical world of love. Luca has fallen in love with Azzurra, a slightly older marine biologist who drags him into madcap metropolitan adventures. And Luca's family life is equally complicated. His father Paolo is an eternally immature huckster and a lying husband. Luca is forced to be "his father's father," rescuing Paolo from a series of laughable predicaments. As before, the light-hearted pranks and adventures of the group of school friends provide the film with its underlying theme, while one of the starring roles is played by the music and pop songs that provide the soundtrack for their lives.
